About Tabeeze

Carrie Shaltz Haslup founded Tabeeze after watching her brother and sister-in-law struggle to dress and undress their newborn daughter for skin-to-skin-feedings. The stress and discomfort of squeezing clothing over her delicate head and twisting her little arms into sleeves seemed like an obvious and unnecessary design flaw.

Armed with her Masters in Architecture, a pair of kitchen scissors, and an old t-shirt, Carrie began deconstructing the design of the traditional baby onesie to make it more functional, ergonomic, and comfortable for both parents and their babies.

What started as an experiment in 2016 eventually led to her invention of Tabeeze's first product, the Bottom-Up Baby Bodysuit.

Putting Mother Earth First

Championing purpose over profit, Tabeeze is passionate about its mission to protect and preserve the planet. Because we are committed to challenging the fast-fashion cycle, bringing attention to greenwashing practices, and setting a new responsible manufacturing standard in the baby clothing market, Tabeeze is 100% GOTS Certified Organic, a Certified B Corporation, and a member of 1% For The Planet.
